Wimbledon Hill Park

London

Your Local Area
Of all the villages that make up modern London, there are few more appealing than Wimbledon, with its unique fusion of rural and urban. The picturesque ‘village’ itself, dating back to medieval times, the Victorian ‘town’ and the rolling open spaces of the common offer so much to discover, enjoy and fall in love with. Of course, Wimbledon is known for its tennis the world over, but there is culture, tempting dining and world class shopping too.

Central London may be less than 30 minutes away, but you may find everything you are looking for here, in Wimbledon, within easy reach of Wimbledon Hill Park.
Wimbledon Hill Park is at the heart of a preserved conservation area within easy walking distance of Wimbledon Common.

It complements its location with its own private grounds that lend it the character of a country estate. Beautifully landscaped with groves of mature trees and green open spaces, it has been carefully planned to retain the unique character of its historic plot, built on land which formed part of the Duke of Wellington’s old estate. There are views across tended grassland to the pond* and a range of attractive walks, a cricket pitch and tennis courts add to the enjoyment of these exclusive spaces.

*To selected plots
Just a short walk from Wimbledon Hill Park, the rolling acres of Wimbledon Common have given Wimbledon its unique appeal. The Common has helped create one of the most fashionable locations of modern London, maintaining a green and attractive environment despite close proximity to the city.

The Common is just one of the open spaces that help give Wimbledon the perfect combination of town and country living.
With more than a thousand acres, the Common offers woodland, scrubland, heathland and mown recreation areas as well as ponds, cycle routes, horse rides and wildlife. The whole area is open to the public 24 hours a day throughout the year.

The largest of the Royal Parks, the rolling grassland is famous for its hundreds of red and fallow deer which roam freely and other wildlife, including woodpeckers and squirrels.

“Wimbledon is a great place to live, especially for children and families. It offers a lovely combination, with the wild open spaces of the Common, high-quality artistic and cultural activities, good schools, a vibrant town centre and easy transport links both into and out of the city.”

Stephen Midlane, Executive Director of Polka Theatre for Children
The friendly atmosphere of Wimbledon Village enhances the pleasures of dining out. Relaxed French, fascinating eastern European, robust Italian, intriguing Chinese and the flavours of India can all be found and enjoyed. From fine dining to simple pleasures, the cuisines of the world are all within easy reach.
